

Parent Involvement = School Success

Research shows that parent support is an important ingredient to your child's success in school. There are many ways for you to be involved, both at home and with the school.

- Make sure your child arrives at school well-rested and with a good breakfast
- Set a regular time and a quiet place for your child to complete homework assignments.
- Get to know your child's teachers.
- Make reading a part of every day.
- Attend open houses and parent-teacher conferences.
- Celebrate your child's successes.
- Surround your child with books and other print materials.
- Ask your child what he or she learns in school each day.
- Plan to eat at least one meal as a family every day. Use mealtime for family discussions.
- Go to the library often and get your child a library card.
- Set a good example. Show concern for, and be involved in, the school and the community.
- Continue to create time for your family to do activities together.
