Message from the County Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Mary Ann Dewan

Hello everyone,

July is Minority Mental Health Month, also known as BIPOC Mental Health Month. BIPOC stands for Black, Indigenous People, and People of Color. This month highlights a nationwide effort developed to shine a light on the multitude of mental health experiences within BIPOC communities.

The struggles that underrepresented groups face regarding mental illness in the U.S. are unique. BIPOC communities face disproportionate inequities due to systemic barriers and historical adversity. According to the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality \(AHRQ\), “racial and ethnic minority groups in the U.S. are less likely to have access to mental health services, less likely to use community mental health services, more likely to use emergency departments, and more likely to receive lower-quality care. Poor mental health care access and quality contribute to poor mental health outcomes, including suicide, among racial and ethnic minority populations.”

We can help. Together, we can raise awareness and bring change to community care, self-directed care, and cultural care. Each one is an effective and vital option people can make for their mental health.

- Community Care highlights ways in which communities of color have provided support to one another.
- Self-directed Care emphasizes that people with mental health and substance use conditions have decision-making authority over services they receive.
- Cultural Care embeds resiliency and healing practices passed down through generations.

Mary Ann Dewan, Ph.D.
County Superintendent of Schools

The late Bebe Moore Campbell, an author, journalist, and the co-founder of NAMI Urban Los Angeles said, “Once my loved ones accepted the diagnosis, healing began for the entire family, but it took too long. It took years. Can’t we, as a nation, begin to speed up that process? We need a national campaign to destigmatize mental illness, especially one targeted toward African Americans. ... It’s not shameful to have a mental illness. Get treatment. Recovery is possible.” This month, be sure to share resources, like ones available from Each Mind Matters or the Office of Minority Health Resource Center specifically designed for people from diverse communities. Wear a lime green ribbon wherever you go and let other people know the facts about mental health and how it impacts your community.

If you or someone you care about is experiencing anxiety, depression or other emotional issues, resources are available. Take the first step and reach out for confidential support, counseling, and referral to resources.
