Hello everyone,

September 19-25 is Climate Action Week, a time when climate leaders from public, private and non-profit sectors gather to discuss and advocate for the health of our planet.

This is also a time for adults to follow the work of young climate activists. Youth engaged in climate activism continue to amplify awareness about sustainable practices and climate justice, while leading impactful education and policy initiatives. Locally, the Silicon Valley Youth Climate Action group continue to make strides in climate advocacy and engagement.

The Santa Clara County Office of Education created a guide to support educators in honor of this week of awareness and action. The Climate Action Week Educator Guide includes background, lessons and resources about incorporating climate education in classrooms and school sites during and beyond Climate Action Week.

Here are a few activities for families to consider for Climate Action Week:

- Clean up your neighborhoods, parks, and local area
- Assess what sustainable swaps can be made at home
- Watch family-friendly nature documentaries

The more we understand our connection to the environment, the more we can influence how those connections impact our health and our planet. Collectively, our individual actions add up to make a big difference.

Together, we can be the solution to a healthy and sustainable environment.

We are #StrongerTogether.

Be well,

Mary Ann Dewan, Ph.D.
County Superintendent of Schools

It is now easier than ever to get sixteen- and seventeen-year-old students civically engaged through pre-registration. Once students pre-register to vote, they will automatically become eligible to vote when they turn eighteen years old. Pre-registration has been successful in California, with more than 900,000 pre-registrations since the program launched in September 2016.
